To whom it may concern,

A little background information about me: I am twenty-four years old, husband of an incredible talented Graphic Designer and the soon to be dad of a baby boy. I was born and raised in Utah County. I am a quick learner, and enjoy learning and doing new things. During high school I was a football player, and threw javelin and shot put for the track team. After graduating from high school, I elected to delay higher education to serve my church.

After returning from a two year proselytizing mission in Mexico, I returned to Mexico a few times to try my luck at network marketing and foreign business. After having some success I returned home and began working for James Landscaping. While working for James Landscaping I learned that success in business comes from customer satisfaction and quality of product. I then started and ran my own landscaping business for a year. I currently work for Intermountain Healthcare in a leadership position.

While attending UVU in the fall of 2015 and spring of 2016 as a sport science major. I began studying about web development and programming. I was fascinated by technology and the advancements/improvements it can make in people's lives. I studied some of the basics in online courses such as Khan Academies intro to JS, and Code Academies HTML and CSS. By the end of the courses I was hooked. I found Devmountain and enrolled in their after hours Web Development Course, which I completed in December Of 2016. Since then I've finish my first web application which allows user to host and join sport pick up games. I've continued to study and push myself to learn new development techniques/technologies.

I'm ready to make the move into the industry. I look forward to learning more and the contributions I will make to your team and business.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Joshua R. Smith
